Family Camp for Kinship Foster Families of African American Children

— An Adaptation and Pilot Study Aimed at Improving Children's Behavioral Health by Strengthening Family Functioning

What is this project about?

Family Check Up/Everyday Parenting (FCU/EDP) is a promising intervention that has yet to be adapted for African American kinship families. FCU/EDP has moderate to large effects on improving parenting practice, reducing child behavior problems, improving emotional regulation, decreasing child risk for obesity, and decreasing child substance use and arrests for typically developing children. The long-term goal of this research is to develop a culturally sensitive FCU/EDP intervention to better meet the needs of African American kinship families, and to improve children's behavioral health through parenting training for caregivers.

Who can participate?

(a) must be an African American (self-identified) kinship caregiver (kin or fictive kin)

(b) caring for one or more African American children age 5 through 15 from the foster care system for at least one month prior to recruitment,

(c) must speak, write and understand English.

What's involved?

- You will participate in the recruitment interview and ecological family assessment, followed by a feedback session.
- You will attend Family Camp followed by three urban outdoor community experiences where the EDP Program and additional content as determined by your needs will be delivered.
- You will participate two assessments before and after attending this program, as well as a focus group meeting to express your feedback of attending this program.

Potential Benefits?

- Food and lodging for the family camp
- Outdoor camp experiences held in the Valley
- Child care activities for the children
- Platform to allow families to stay connected
- Better access and utilize services
- Improve parenting skills
- Better relationship with children
- Better child behavioral health outcomes
- $20 dollars gift card for each assessment

Potential Risks?

There are no foreseeable risks to you. You can reach out to the research team of this project if you have any questions or concerns.
